Samuel Briones has won numerous million-dollar jury verdicts and settlements on behalf of his clients.

In a medical malpractice wrongful death case, Briones settled against the City of Chicago. His client was 3 years old when her mother died due to improper dosage of Isoniazid, a drug to prevent tuberculosis. The decedent got the drug at a City of Chicago Health Clinic. In a brain injury case, Briones settled against a delivery truck company. His client, a pedestrian, was struck by a delivery van while running across the street in the middle of the block. The truck accident aggravated psychological problems. The accident left her in a coma with a skull fracture and brain injuries, from which his client partially recovered. During the jury trial, Briones settled for $3.75 million.

In a wrongful death case, Briones settled against a commercial truck company. His client was a 71-year-old woman with significant health problems who was stopped in traffic southbound on I-55 when she was struck from behind by a commercial truck. She was killed in the crash. After the accident, the driver was arrested for driving under the influence of a controlled substance (cocaine). The case settled for $1.5 million.

Briones tried a construction injury case before a jury in Lake County, Indiana. His client, an ironworker, sustained serious injuries when he fell from the roof of a building under construction as he was walking backwards on a steel I-beam. Briones contended that the defendant contractor was negligent because it did not put up safety nets. The defendants offered $50,000 to settle the case. Briones proceeded to trial and the jury awarded $1.5 million for severe fracture of the right ankle and both wrists and the inability to work as an ironworker.

In a medical malpractice case, a widower's wrongful death suit against a doctor alleged his late wife's primary care doctor discovered that a neurosurgeon had operated on the wrong part of her spine, but failed to tell her. She subsequently was given an epidural steroid injection to treat her continuing back pain, and the injection led to a deadly staph infection. The jury returned a verdict against the two doctors in the amount of $1.2 million.
